NEWSLETTER

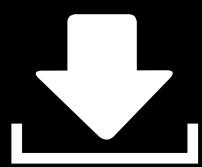

Prison Mike is here to scare you straight! All this week, Michael has been going around the office sharing his stories of the hard times he spent behind bars. He has openly shared his experience eating “gruel” and being subject to dementor attacks. Although noone in the office has taken him seriously, his antics are entertaining to say the least. These actions have been viewed by some as being offensive towards some employees who have actually been in prison before. In fact, one of our employees recently left the company due to the attention Michael brought upon his past criminal activity. Our corporate office in New York has launched a full investigation into the matter. None-the-less, Michael still stands behind his actions saying, “you know, if I wasn’t here to steer these people away from prison then who knows where they would end up. I’m just trying to help people. If you want to crucify a bad person go after Toby!” We will keep you updated as the investigation progresses. With a looming lawsuit likely ahead, don’t expect christmas bonuses folks!
